

Endangered Planet Foundation and One Earth | One Dream Celebrate America's 250th Birthday through "One Day in Laguna Beach"

Laguna Beach, California — July 4, 2026, — Endangered Planet Foundation announces America 250: One Day in Laguna Beach, a visual tribute created in the spirit of One Earth | One Dream, celebrating the United States' 250th birthday through the creative community of Laguna Beach, California.

This commemorative image marks 250 years for our nation, Endangered Planet Foundation invites you to reflect on what it means for the United States to strive toward becoming a passionate Earth Trustee — being one called to improve, protect, create, regenerate and lead through example.

"America's story has never been one of perfection," said Charles Michael Murray, Founder of Endangered Planet Foundation. "It is a story of aspiration, reinvention, courage, creativity, and responsibility. At its best, America protects freedom, uplifts communities, advances innovation, defends natural treasures, and shares its highest ideals with the world. As we celebrate 250 years, One Earth | One Dream calls us to become better trustees of the Earth we all share."

Set against the coast of Laguna Beach, the image portrays a festive oceanfront celebration with fireworks, families, artists, musicians, sailboats, flags, and a shared sense of community. It reflects the idea that the American experience is shaped not only by national milestones, but also by local places, civic imagination, environmental stewardship, and the creative spirit of its people.

belief that humanity shares one planet. This idea encourages education, dialogue, public art, environmental awareness, cultural exchange, and regenerative action. The America 250 tribute highlights the United States' role in advancing conservation, science, the arts, environmental protection, national parks, and community-based action — achievements that continue to inspire people far beyond its borders.

The Foundation also acknowledges that America's greatness is strengthened by honest reflection. To be a good Earth Trustee means to recognize past and present challenges as we work toward thriving communities, cultural respect, and a healthier planet for future generations.

Laguna Beach, known for its legacy of artists, coastline, conservation values, and community character, offers a meaningful setting for this national tribute. The image celebrates America's 250th not as a single moment in history, but as an invitation to imagine the next 250 years with greater wisdom, unity, creativity, and care for oneself and the Earth.
